Employee Dispute Resolution: Mediation Through Peer Review

Course Overview

Have you ever been in a workplace situation where a supervisor has made a decision that you did not agree with? Did you wish that you could ask someone else what they thought of the decision, whether they would have done the same thing?

The peer review process offers employees just that chance, using a formalised procedure to ask, consider, and resolve just these sorts of questions.

This one-day workshop will teach delegates everything they need to know about employee dispute resolution through mediation.

Course Objectives

This one-day course will teach delegates:

- What the peer review process is?
- A process for employees to file grievances and for management to respond.
- How to choose a facilitator and panel?
- What is involved in the hearing process, from preliminary meetings to the hearing, and the decision process?
- What responsibilities and powers a panel should have?
- How to apply professional questioning and probing techniques?
- Why peer review panels fail and how to avoid those pitfalls?

Target Audience

Any individual or organization that wants to learn about employee dispute resolution through mediation.

Prerequisite

There are no prerequisites for this course.

Duration

- 1 Day

Course Outline

What is Peer Review?

To begin, delegates will discuss what the peer review process is and is not.

Initiating the Process

This session will look at the first three stages of the process, filing a grievance, informing the defendant, and obtaining witness statements.

The Peer Review Panel

During this session, delegates will learn who should be on the peer review panel.

Asking Questions

Next, delegates will hone their questioning and probing skills.

The Peer Review Process

This session will introduce delegates to the remainder of the peer review process: preparation, the hearing itself, and the decision-making process.

Panel Walkthrough

The bulk of the afternoon will be spent role playing a peer review scenario.

Why Does the Process Fail?

To wrap things up, delegates will explore common reasons why the peer review process fails and how to avoid or resolve these problems.

Workshop Wrap-Up

At the end of the day, delegates will have an opportunity to ask questions and fill out an action plan.
