Course Outline

What It Takes to Make It

To begin the course, delegates will review their pre-assignment, which asked them to consider what entrepreneurial characteristics they have.

Resources to Consider

Next, delegates will learn about other resources that they can leverage.

Laying the Groundwork

In this session, delegates will learn how to find, outline, and assess business ideas. They will get some hands-on practice by working on a business concept of their own. To wrap up the session, delegates will learn how to evaluate their capacity for risk and what role this plays in their business plan.

Building On Your Business Idea

This session covers developing a product idea, identifying target market and customers, developing a value proposition, and creating financial projections.

Business Ownership Options

Next, delegates will learn about the different configurations that a business can take, as well as some terms that are unique to entrepreneurship. They will also consider the advantages and disadvantages of purchasing a franchise or an existing business.

Key Documents to Prepare

The second day of the course will start with information on creating a pitch deck, executive summary, company presentation, technical white paper, and business plan.

Gathering Funding

This session will begin with an overview of financial statements. Delegates will also explore options for funding their business.

Developing Your Product

In this session, delegates will learn a seven-stage process for developing a product. They will also learn the basics of intellectual property protection.

Creating a Sales and Marketing Strategy

This session covers the six stages of the marketing cycle, which includes creating a marketing plan with the six P's. Information about leveraging social media and building your sales force is also included.

Branding 101

To begin the third day of the course, delegates will learn the basics of branding, including how to develop a brand name, slogan, and logo.

Setting Up Your Office

In this session, delegates will learn tips for choosing a business location. They will also consider the pros and cons of a home-based business as well as working on the road.

Launching the Business

This session will give delegates some things to do before, during, and after the business launches. We will also share tips for setting up the business' structure and getting the right people on board.

Keeping the Business Moving

Next, delegates will learn ways to monitor their business' progress, strategies for growth, signs of trouble, and techniques for staying motivated.

Being an Entrepreneurial Leader

This session will explore entrepreneurial leadership characteristics. Delegates will also learn about Michael Gerber's three perspectives and how to use them to grow their business.

Bringing It All Together

To wrap everything up, delegates will review a checklist for building their business and identify their next steps.
